Shaded Lives African American Women

In Shaded Lives, Beretta E. Smith-Shomade looks at the under-examined issue of the image of black women--both the objectification and empowerment--in commercial TV, in sitcoms, music videos, network news and talk shows since 1980. Her aim is to create a better understanding of the media portrayals of African-American women.

African American life during the Great Depression and the New Deal. The Great Depression of the 1930s worsened the already bleak economic situation of African Americans. They were the first to be laid off from their jobs, and they suffered from an unemployment rate two to three times that of whites. In early public assistance programs African Americans often received substantially less aid ...

The politics of black slang are tricky. Black slang and AAVE (African-American Vernacular English) have long been considered inferior to so-called "standard" English, and the black people who use it seen as uneducated or unintelligent (forcing many to master the art of code-switching). So when suddenly words and phrases that have strong ties to the black community are adopted and warped by non ...
